Robt. Leidig Has Fourth Proposal for P. O. Site

All Propositions On Rental Basis

Just as there were plenty of sites suggested for the city hall at various times that building a civic center has been proposed in Carmel, so, too, are there plenty of sites available for building a new post office.

Fourth of these popped up this week when it was learned that Robert G. Leidig, Carmel pioneer and for long years fire chief, had offered to build a post office on the northeast corner of Sixth and Dolores, opposite the stage depot.

Last week a third proposal had been submitted by John B. Jordan, Pine Inn proprietor, who offered the property of his sister on the northwest corner of Sixth and San Carlos, now occupied by the Union Service Station.

For many months the two propositions made respectively by M. J. Murphy, Inc., and Carl Burrows, had stood alone. Murphy's proposal was to build on the block east of the present post office, most likely on the corner of Seventh and Mission; while Burrows tendered the southeast corner of Lincoln and Seventh, opposite La Ribera hotel.

Since Postal Inspector D. A. Pressley of Los Angeles was here last week, looking over locations, no decision has been reached, so far as local advices were aware.

The urgent request of the Carmel Business Association that the government build its own post office building in Carmel has been on file since last year, but division of opinion in Carmel over where such a post office might most favorably be

MASTEN COMMENT ON JAPAN TRADE STIRS COUNCIL

The city of Carmel is writing Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Congressman Jack Z. Anderson protesting trade in war supplies to Japan.

Mayor Herbert Heron proposed this action and Councilman Bernard Rowntree seconded it. "Do you believe in selling revolvers to robbers?" Heron asked.

The whole matter came up when the mayor called attention to Richard L. Masten's timely comment in his column in last week's Pine Cone.

Transient Trade Bar Is Sought

Santa Barbara Plan Is Model

In Santa Barbara they have a law for it. In Carmel, too, this same model ordinance will be suggested to the city council, probably when the new council comes in, to bar so-called "transient" summer businesses from taking the "cream" off the Carmel trade.

Such was the indication made at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Carmel Business Association at La Ribera Hotel, when the merchant's group also reported overwhelming sentiment in Carmel for one-hour parking limits in the main business area.

The association also plans to ask the council for street cleaning in the shopping district three times a week—but who is to pay for this service, and how, was not brought up.

The idea of a clean-up week with free rubbish disposal was also mentioned. None of these matters is expected to be brought to the attention of the present council.

WANTS LIVE SEA OTTERS

THE RIGHT TO VOTE

(An Editorial)

Firmly convinced that the ultimate welfare of our nation depends upon maintenance of our democratic ideals of government, and believing that maintenance of those ideals can only be assured through the widest possible participation by the electorate in our government, The Carmel Pine Cone in its issue of April 15th, the issue immediately following the coming local election, will publish the names of those registered voters in Carmel who fail to exercise their right to vote.

Our right to vote is a heritage of strife and hardship. It was not come by easily. The theory of democracy in the beginning was a thing scorned. Through more than a century in this nation, we have attained certain standards of democracy which, although far from perfection, have led us to believe that we are on the right road. However, those principles of government are once again under attack.

In other nations throughout the world, democracy has been supplanted by forms of government alien to our ideas. Peoples in many countries have either willingly or unwillingly given up their rights to have a voice in their governments. Even within the borders of our own nation there are apostles of disaster who claim that democracy cannot work.

It is incumbent upon us, the people of the United States, the citizens of just this village, to combat these alien theories. We cannot do it by criticizing our government without participating in it. We cannot hope for the continued growth of our nation toward its democratic ideals by permitting 50 per cent of the electorate to exercise its franchise, while the other 50 per cent sits at home.

In the city election in Carmel in 1936 only 58 per cent of the registered voters eligible to vote actually did so. In the election in 1938, only 49 per cent of those in Carmel eligible to vote went to the polls and voted. With two candidates running for office, 25 per cent of those able to vote can name their man. With three candidates running, 17 per cent of the electorate can name their man. This is not democracy. This is not the voice of the majority. This is not the way which can stave off dictatorships.

There are at present 1688 persons within the city limits of Carmel who are eligible to cast their ballots on April 9th. We shall publish the names of all those who don't. There must be in the United States a wider participation in government, for the record of the remainder of the nation is no better than

"GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BOOK".....by R. J. Gale

The dead sometimes refuse to stay dead. With hands that bless or curse, they reach from their graves to touch the lives of those they love or hate, even to influence the lives of those whom they have never known. Such a woman was Daphne du Maurier's "Rebecca", malevolently hating, whose very memory in time destroyed those who had loved her as well as those whom she hated.

The story is told of Robert E. Lee's influence at Washington and Lee College, so great as to influence character long after his death, even in simple everyday things. The college cafeteria for years had neither checkers nor cashiers. Students made up their own checks, paid their bills and made change when necessary. Lee's influence was behind an honor system which worked.

We need not go to a novel nor to Virginia to find an example of one who, though long since dead, blesses and influences hundreds whom she had never known. I had lent my copy of Walt Whitman to a friend and felt the need of having it. As it was not possible to get it at the time, Miss Elizabeth Niles sent me the library copy. It was the much-used, well-marked copy which had once belonged to Ella Reid Harrison. Among the passages marked were:

"The past, the future, majesty, love—if they are vacant of you, you are vacant of them."

That must have been a part of the philosophy of Ella Reid Harrison, a philosophy that enriched her own life while she lived, and since her death has touched the lives of all who make use of the beautiful library she has left as a memorial to her husband.

Not in cold stone have Ralph Chandler and Ella Reid Harrison been memorialized, but in a living, serving institution. Here among the books both of them used and loved, among thousands of other books since added, the memorial becomes a thing which enters the lives of most of us who make Carmel our home. Even to the casual visitor, it becomes something to be remembered with gratitude long afterward.

One need not have known Ella Reid Harrison to feel sure that she would have loved the library as we know it today—a place of serenity, of beauty, of service, presided over by Elizabeth Niles, whose whole life centers around the ideals of unselfish service. With Barbara Wood, who may not officially enjoy the title, but who is known to every school child in Carmel as the children's librarian, and Clara D. Baker, she runs the library in the quietly efficient and orderly manner which only great city libraries as those in Cleveland and Los Angeles enjoy.

To Miss Niles and her assistants goes much of the credit for the library as we know it; back of the scenes in the library's board of trustees, whose chairman is that remarkable woman, Mrs. Karl Rendtorff, as familiar with the world's great books of the past as she is with world events today. On the board with Mrs. Rendtorff are Kent Clark, Paul C. Prince, J. B. Adams and Alfred Matthews, giving their time freely and generously without other thought than to serve the best interests of the community.

Few would question the statement that the library shelves are filled with books that indicate the cultural levels of Carmel. The latest fiction, contemporary history, economics and politics, philosophy, science and education, are all well represented. In addition to the priceless collection of old books which the library has received from its founder and others, the best recent books on painting, music, and the dance are found in ever-increasing numbers. The drama collection is a never-ending joy to a community in which the theater is so vital an interest.

How are the books chosen? Why are they chosen? Who chooses them? The answers to these questions are found in the members of the Book Committee, representative of the varied interests of Carmel, who bring wide experience, maturity and breadth of vision to their task. The result is a library overflowing with books on every conceivable interest, chosen to satisfy not only those who seek information or amusement, but to help us build the good life as well. Members of this book committee are: Mrs. Hurd Comstock, chairman; Mrs. Karl Rendtorff, Miss Anne Martin, Mrs. J. B. Dennis, Mrs. W. W. McKee, Mrs. F. Haasis, Austin James, Mrs. Marjory Lloyd and Miss Elizabeth M. Niles.

An harmonious building set in a garden among flowers, trees and shrubs, a well-lighted spacious interior, thousands of well-chosen books in an atmosphere of gracious charm, a staff generous with their interest and unflagging in their interest—this is our library. And in the background the gracious influence of a great woman who erected a memorial to the man she loved, and builded better than she knew.

Thank you, Ella Reid Harrison, and as we close we turn again to your well-marked copy of "Leaves of Grass" where you have underlined: "A strong being is the proof of the race and of the ability of the universe." And again: "The soul Forever and forever — longer than soil is brown and solid—longer than water ebbs and flows."

WHAT CARMEL'S BOY SCOUTS AND SEA SCOUTS ARE DOING

BOY SCOUT FEAST

When 21 Boy Scouts sit down to dinner there has to be a full table or they eat the silverware as well. The Scouts of Troop No. 86, the Carmel American Legion troop, got just to the silverware, and looked like a mighty pleased band of young men as they stood up for their American Boy Scout ceremonies and to receive awards won during the past season.

Of course, Mrs. Mabel C. Sampson of the Normandy Inn was the host of the evening, and with a shrewd estimate of how much young men can hold, provided the delicate yet sustaining viands which made the men of tomorrow feel so pleasantly filled. She takes a real interest in the troop, Scout Master P. A. McCreery reports, and last Friday evening provided the surprise banquet.

Prior to the formal dinner, none of the Scouts knew what was in store. They had orders for a brief emergency meeting at the Scout House on Mission and Eighth and met there at 6:30—under orders not to have eaten after luncheon. Some thought they were going swimming, some to go to a picture show, but none guessed the right thing. Then they were marched in full regalia around to the Normandy where members of the scout masters' families and friends and the newspaper men were waiting. Eyes popped as they beheld the smorgasborg, and when turkey came on, all settled down to cramming the last little empty spaces.

Scout Master McCreery welcomed the Scouts and Assistant Scout Master Bob Harnisch distributed the badges, pennants and other awards. At the conclusion Mrs. Sampson was given a rousing "Thank you!"

Those present were: Edwin Bidwell, Russell Bohlke*, Donald Burge, Jack Gansel*, Hugh Gottfried*, Jim Handley*, Bob Holm*, Sandy Hook*, Ty Hook, Eade Jordan*, Jim Kelsey*, Louis Levinson, Jr., Phil Malloway, Jack Mays, George Moller*, Dick Rohr, Hans Sappock, Gordon Stoddard*, Mike Sturtevant, Arthur Templeman, and Jim Welsh*. (* Stands for one-year service stars).

To Jim Welsh went two and a half green bars on the termination of his duties as senior patrol leader. He was succeeded by Eade Jordan in his office. Patrol leaders who received troop pennants were Stoddard, Indian patrol; Kelsey, Hawk; Gardner, Pioneer; and Bohlke, the new Flying Eagle patrol. Assistants who received badges were: Holm, Indian; Gansel, Hawk; Welsh, Pioneer, and Ty Hook, Flying Eagle.

Service stars also were won by Motje Hansen, Arthur Jones, John Mooring and Bill Wishart, who were absent. Other officers honored were the scribes, Hansen and Jones; the troop librarian, Malloway; and the quartermasters, Gottfried and Wishart.

Handsome prizes to be earned during the coming months were displayed. These were honor patrol pennants, individual service kits, patrol cooking outfits, and one-year perfect attendance pins.

SEA SCOUTS, AHoy!

Glad news in the local Sea Scout ship, Flying Cloud, is that the life boat which the Carmel Sea Scouts purchased from the Gilroy Sea Scouts a year ago and began refitting last summer, will have a Gray motor.

The motor was donated and should give the lifeboat a good turn of speed.

Jon Konigshofer, skipper of the Carmel Sea Scouts, recently had the hull brought from Stillwater Cove to the front garden of the Carmel Legion Hall where it is now undergoing scraping and painting.

Plans are to fit it out as a motor sailer.

It is recalled that several years ago the Weston boys and other Sea Scouts built their own boat which they sailed for a time. It later was sold to John Steinbeck and was wrecked, salvaged, and finally went to pieces on the beach at Monterey.

New Handbill Ordinance Read

Two ordinances were given first reading by the Carmel city council on Wednesday evening. Rather unexpectedly the new zoning ordinance, revamped once again, was read for the first time.

City Clerk Saidee Van Brower read it to herself for 25 minutes, as only a slight change was involved in the ordinance already read in full once before except for the section referring to the western limit of the C-2 or heavy industrial zone.

This border was shifted from Mission street eastward to the middle of the block, leaving the C-2 zone a total of approximately 112 lots. The north-south bounds are Third avenue and 120 feet north of Sixth, and the east limit is Torres street.

A new ordinance was also read, dealing with handbills. City Attorney William Luis Hudson explained that although the old handbill ordinance was almost identical with the new one, it would be to the city's advantage in court of law to adopt the uniform ordinance suggested by the California League of Municipalities.

The ordinance specifies that handbills (throw-away papers) may be handed to a person willing to accept them, but may not be thrown on to private or public property. This does not conflict, the supreme court ruled, with freedom of speech. The council will meet again next Wednesday at 5 p. m.

A protest against a neighbor's frogs was among the correspondence read for the enlightenment of the council.

THE ANTHEM OF THE UNIVERSE

By NORMAN ASTLEY*

It begins in Ocean caverns.

Whose depth to depth resound.

It rises on the glittering spray.

Till the sun attracts the sound.

We praise thee O God.

The nearer orbs repeat it.

And the far off spheres beyond.

While new born worlds from far off space,

In unison respond.

We praise thee O God.

The souls that hoped and struggled.

The hearts that quailed and fell.

Live again their tale to tell.

We praise thee O God.

The Friends we knew who passed away.

Though laid beneath the sod.

Will rise again in glory,

We praise thee O God.

These form the rolling bass,

Ascending line by line.

Till space with ether filled.

Leads the air divine.

We praise thee O God.

There is no death, all is life.

Like the buds on Aarons' Rod.

From human soul to Cherubim,

All praise thee O God.

PRESIDIO MEMBERS OF CAST TO BRIGHTEN "WHAT A LIFE"

Rehearsals of the Henry Aldrich comedy, "What a Life", are progressing on the stage of Sunset auditorium, and the play promises to be one of the funniest ever given in Carmel.

Milt Eaton, whose own theatrical labors in conducting her marionette show in the evenings, and writing sketches in her spare hours, has prevented her taking part in the Carmel Players' shows in the past two years, is playing one of the feminine leads, and will prove herself in her part of the high school principal's secretary to be one of the dearest comedienne in our town. She and Donnan Jeffers take complete care of the heart interest, and those to whom Donnan's performance in "Julius Caesar" was a revelation and a surprise, are eager to see him in this modern comedy.

Two of the "discoveries" of the "Good Hope" reappear in "What a Life". Louise Welty, who played Jo has the part of Gertie, and George Gossler, who was so excellent as the boy Barend plays the excitable Bill.

And it's a safe bet that the "discoveries" of this production will come from the Presidio, for Rosanne Sprinkle bids fair to be completely appealing and loveable as Henry's girl, and Frank de Langton, if the impression he has already made in rehearsal means anything, is going to be one of the funniest and most popular villains in any theater. His last appearances have been in West Point, where he had parts in "Three Men on a Horse" and in West Point's famous "100th Nite Show". And Bee Sprinkle, wife of Colonel Sprinkle, has been prominent in dramatics and the recreation work of the Monterey and other army posts.

"What a Life" opens at the Sunset auditorium on April 5 and will play for three nights. Chick McCarthy is directing, and is producing the play in cooperation with the Carmel Players and the dramatic department of the Carmel Adult School.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION CLASS

The women of Mrs. Anne Uzzell's physical recreation class held a St. Patrick's day party on Thursday evening, with 27 in attendance. The table was beautifully set and the decorations made by Girl Scouts of Troop 2, as a community service. Wilen Jones and Rose Funchess did an Irish lilt, and members of the class, directed by Mrs. Russell Shipley, presented the one-act comedy, "Every Thursday." The class meets on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Shepard Achieves A Hit With "New York Streets"

"The Streets of New York", indeed a touching melodrama, was brought to life on the stage of the First Theater over in Monterey through the able work as director and actor of William Shepard. All the critics are agreed that the production was the most successful of any yet staged by the Troupers of the Gold Coast, the nearest perfect, the smoothest, most coherent, and altogether pleasing.

Played three times last week-end, "The Streets of New York" was brought back last night and will run again tomorrow and Sunday evenings. The audiences have been both packed and appreciative.

So thoroughly well done was this play that it is difficult to pick out any one name without picking out almost the entire group. For instance, as the butler who had scarcely a line, Verne Williams did a remarkable bit of acting.

For many, Bob Bratt as Badger was outstanding, and this may very well go down in the local theater annals as Bratt's best part. With all his aptitude for comedy, he handled the role with due restraint and subtlety.

For a role in the grand theatrical manner, Lee Crowe, who has been Mark Livingstone on the eastern stage, gave a light handling which provided a good foil. John Good, who has been a distinct addition to the local theater recently, provided a sad-figured Paul, son of the cheated sea captain, Fairweather, played by George Smith with all the bluntness and good heartedness one might expect from an old-time skipper.

Milt Latham recreated Puffy, the little Irish baker, with sympathy, and with Mrs. Puffy, played by Willa Mae McIntosh, and Dan, taken by Eddie George, this trio provided all the low comedy necessary. Dan's sniggering, loutish mannerisms were a bright spot.

Jessie Joan Brown played with accustomed grace the soft-eyed and sacrificing Lucy, daughter of the sea captain, since his death fallen upon humble circumstances. Connie Bell recreated her old part of Alida, the selfish daughter of the scoundrel, Gideon Bloodgood, adeptly, and Bloodgood, taken by Shepard, was another of those snarling villains about whom so many of these melodramas of the First Theater revolve.

Not only the direction and acting, but the casting struck a new high for these productions.

Carol Joyce Hildebrand is always popular, and lent her tiny charm as the flower girl and again in the olio with her song, "The Bird in Nelly's Hat".

Even the olio had a different character from previous First Theater productions, being more even if with fewer high spots. "How Little Nell Helped Finland" was a good take-off, the fourth of a series of "Little Nell" song skits begun with Jerry Chance's "How Little Nell Founded Los Angeles". Elspeth Frelson added a new and pleasing number in "The Ballad of Christine LeRoy", and Everett Gray showed he can sing with his rendition of "The Bowery".

Milt Latham set off the olio with his blackface number, "Nobody".

Down at the end of the list of credits that deserves a special star is Franklin Dixon who furnished a wide variety of striking sets. —F. L.

DR. HELEN MacKNIGHT DOYLE SPEAKS ON LIFE OF MARY AUSTIN AT CARMEL WOMEN'S CLUB

"In no other business has one the need of a friend as in writing a book." These were the words of Mary Austin addressed to her friend, James K. Lynch, and quoted by Dr. Helen MacKnight Doyle, author of a sympathetic psychological biography of the writer, before the book section of the Carmel Women's Club.

In Dr. Doyle Mary Austin had indeed found a friend, was the impression gained by members on Wednesday morning when she reviewed her book for them.

The speaker stated that in her book she had attempted to defend Mary Austin against the criticisms that had been levelled at her life. She felt that she had an understanding of Mary Austin, both as a physician and a friend, and her book was chiefly a psychological study of the writer's early life and an explanation of the complexes which resulted from the happenings of this period.

Her first meeting with Mary Austin took place in Bishop, Calif., where Dr. Doyle was a practicing physician and Mary Austin was a teacher in the local school.

According to Dr. Doyle there is no place like a doctor's office for hearing gossip and from her patients' stories of Mrs. Austin's neglect of her sub-normal child and disregard of her husband, she had formed a dislike for her.

Her first meeting with Mrs. Austin took place when she was called in to take care of the child. Dr. Doyle drove in her horse and buggy to the school to get the mother and was horrified when she refused to come with her to the bedside of her sick baby.

"I am not good for Ruth and Ruth is not good for me," was the way Mary Austin phrased her refusal to accompany the doctor.

After a visit to the child Dr. Doyle was impressed with the fact that this, to her, seemingly heartless refusal, was the right course for Mary Austin to adopt. During the illness of Ruth she reported daily to her mother the progress that was being made and so laid the foundations for her deep friendship and understanding of Mrs. Austin.

As a child, Mary Austin, said Dr. Doyle, had two personalities, "I, Mary" and "Mary, by herself". The first was the bulwark against which she leaned when things were too hard for the sensitive "Mary, by herself."

In her childhood she was aware that her mother did not love her or sympathize with her. Neither did her brothers. The only true love she encountered was through her father and younger sister. After their death she was without love.

This lack of the security of family love gave her an inferiority complex that stayed with her all her life, according to Dr. Doyle.

From her childhood Dr. Doyle progressed on through the life of Mary Austin, explaining how time and again she was thwarted in her attempt to become one of a group accepted by them in friendship and in consequence had so many of her actions misinterpreted.

During her girlhood, her marriage, her motherhood and subsequent life she always had this trouble and as a result her sense of inferiority.

During her life in Bakersfield she is said to have had no friends. She was also accused at this time of not caring what she wore and as substantiation of this is the story that she was married in an unbecoming brown dress. But in a letter, which Dr. Doyle read from her book, Mary Austin thanked Albert Bender for the gift of a beautiful piece of material. She stated that she loved the color and texture of cloth and that his piece was so particularly fine that she was going to have it made into a gown to wear only when she had to meet newspaper reporters.

Dr. Doyle also told of how Mary Austin was meticulous in her choice of words in her writing. She spent four hours on a hot summer day in Bakersfield trying to find a word to describe the hills about there. Finally it came, "puckery", the absolutely exact word for them.

The last part of Dr. Doyle's talk was taken up with Mary Austin's life in Carmel. How even here she found she was an outsider and strove to become one of the group composed of George Sterling, Jimmy Hopper and their friends. At this time Mary Austin called herself a "maverick" in the town.

Even Carmel has many stories to tell about Mary Austin, said Dr. Doyle, that do not do her justice. The impression gained by the audience was that with the fuller understanding of the author presented by Dr. Doyle much of her seemingly strange behavior could be understood and discounted.

After leaving here where she was known as "The Star of Carmel," said Dr. Doyle, Mary Austin went to Santa Fe where she was known as "The Uncrowned King of Santa Fe". It was in Santa Fe that she died.

One of the interesting points brought out by Dr. Doyle was that Mary Austin had developed a philosophy of life that embodies the elements of the present Oxford Group and has been hailed as new and of the times; yet, 20 years ago in Carmel Mary Austin, in her life, was living their precepts which were her own—and was misunderstood.

Dr. Doyle's book was reviewed recently in The Pine Cone.—M. L.

AS THE CROW FRIES

By Richard L. Masten

OH SIGNOR MUSSOLINI

Oh Signor Mussolini, what was all the talk about
That you and Adolph had beside the border?
And did you tell the meany that you'd help him shoot it out?
Or did you take a stand for law and order?
On coming from the meeting there were smiles upon your face;
Your manner radiated jubilation.
But won't your smile be fleeting if a Nazi win takes place
And Europe's under Hitler's domination?

Oh Signor Mussolini, at your meeting in the Alps
Did Adolph find you firm and undeluded?
You surely must have seen he wants to lift a lot of scalps
And yours is very possibly included.
For when a man on horse-back starts to make his charger rear
And moves about the world with mighty forces
Not only must the mossback-like old Chamberlain beware
But even more the boys on smaller horses.

So Signor Mussolini, you must watch your Ps and Qs.
For Adolph isn't greatly to be trusted.
And if within his bean he thinks you're somebody to use
He'll only treat you right till England's busted.
But maybe it will strike you that my warning's premature
Regardless of the phrases that were uttered.
For though I cannot like you I am very very sure
You know the side on which your bread is buttered.

YOU'LL HAVE TO WAIT

It is fashionable, just now, to make predictions about Mr. Roosevelt's decision concerning a third term. It almost seems that it is fashionable to make wrong predictions, for all of those which might be tested so far have failed to pan out. And because of this I am tempted to make one of my own. For though as a prognosticator I have little to recommend me but consistency in error I can't do much worse than the major prophets have done.

I don't believe that Mr. Roosevelt will make any announcement till after the Republican convention. Until then, unless I am mistaken, he won't know himself whether he wants to run or not. For the requisites for a final decision are not yet present.

Mr. Roosevelt's career in the presidency has been greatly influenced by that of Woodrow Wilson. He has taken into account not only the Wilson successes but the Wilson failures. And the final failure of the broken Wilson was his leaving of both great parties in the hands of the machine politicians.

Recall what happened in 1920. The Democratic party, which had gained power and held power only because of division among the Republicans, was definitely out of favor. The president was an ailing man and incapable of exercising any control over it. And with the prospect of an easy victory before them the Republicans nominated Warren G. Harding, a good-natured and well-meaning politician who could be handled.

Then the Democrats, whose only chance for victory lay in selecting an outstanding candidate and conducting a fighting campaign, nominated Mr. Cox, who was a sort of Tweedledee for Harding. And from that time on it didn't matter much who won, for whether Harding or Cox became president the machine politicians and their friends and benefactors were bound to come out on top, while the people were bound to lose.

Now, 20 years later, the situation is very similar. We have had two terms of personal administration, during which the popularity of the president has been far greater than that of his party. We have had a period of sociological, though perhaps not of political, liberalism. We have had an emergency with which we coped passably but not entirely satisfactorily.

There is a general feeling that while Mr. Roosevelt might be able to carry his party to victory, no other Democratic candidate could do it. Consequently if the President should announce that he does not choose to run, the bars would be down to the Republican politicians to pick some manageable time-server and let him coast into office.

And the Democratic machine politicians, who have relied upon the President's popularity to keep them in power, would be out from under the Roosevelt thumb. With the odds against them anyhow they'd be tempted to play for big stakes and nominate a man who, if elected, would play their game rather than make them play his.

The New Deal, which whether you like all of it or some of it or none of it, is dear to the President, would be elbowed into the discard. The nation's politics might well go back to the status of 1920, when the ship of state was little more than a gravy boat. And all because the Republicans had been allowed to feel that they didn't have to be on their toes, with a candidate and a platform that meant something.

If the President postpones a decision on his candidacy till after the Republican convention they won't feel this way. They'll have to provide against the possibility of his running again and nominate a man who has a chance of beating him. Their candidate will have to have popular appeal, and so will their platform. They'll still stand to the right of Roosevelt, but they'll be within hailing distance.

This will practically compel the Democrats to nominate a New Dealer, since if they go to the right of the Republicans they'll lose Mr. Roosevelt's personal following and with it any chance whatever of carrying the election. Then Mr. Roosevelt may, if he chooses, refuse to run without seriously endangering the policies, or at least the sociological trend, for which he has stood.

Thus while all of us may be anxious to say to him, "Make up your mind," there is good reason for his not letting anyone know what he proposes to do, particularly if he prefers not to stand for a third term. For by withholding that knowledge, and even any such indication as a refusal to allow slates of instructed delegates to be presented, he may influence the trend of American politics for years to come. Not till after the Republicans have declared themselves will his hands be free. Not till then will he be able to see clearly in his own mind whether he ought to run or not.

All of which doesn't mean that he may not decide to run no matter what the Republicans do. But that is another story, and one prognostication at a time is enough. After all, I've only got one neck to stick out.

WHAT IS A DOLLAR?

A dillar, a dollar, a ten o'clock scholar;

Define what a dollar implies.

The pay of the worker in jeans or white collar?

Reward for which capital tries?

A measure of riches and influence which is Accepted at home and afar?

The wealth in your breeches? That's right, but the hitch is

It still doesn't tell what they are.

If you had a dollar and I had a dollar

And no one had products to sell

We'd find, though it caused us to set up a holler,

A dollar a mere bagatelle.

And that proposition should arouse a suspicion

That dollars are linked to supply

And lead to admission of this definition:

"A dollar is what it will buy".

If gold is where you find it, money is what you can do with it. Most of us have learned by now that it hasn't any value in itself. We've learned to differentiate between pies and pennies, between paper wealth and real wealth. And that is a step on the road toward a sane handling of our economic

CARMEL FORUM CALENDAR OF EVENTS IS ANNOUNCED

The program of the Carmel Forum for April and May is announced this week by J. W. Getsinger, Carmel's forum director. In addition to the lecture on "India, the Struggle for Independence", scheduled for tonight, three programs will be presented.

Dr. K. D. Lum, Chinese educator, philosopher, and special envoy to the United States from the Republic of China, will appear on Friday, April 12th, to discuss "China Today". Dr. Lum is a technical expert on foreign affairs in his own government, and is professor of public education at the University of Chiao Tung, in Shanghai. He is a fluent speaker, with just enough accent to keep his listeners fascinated.

He will be followed on April 26 by Alvin Jacob Beller, recently returned to Carmel after two and one-half years spent in travel, painting, and collection of many interesting films, showing some of the most beautiful spots on the North American continent. He will show many of his films, accompanying each with personal comments and memories.

"Our Stake in Europe" will be the topic for discussion on Friday, May 10, in the concluding Forum event for this year. The speaker will be Dr. Alfred G. Fisk, professor of philosophy at San Francisco State College. Dr. Fisk is well known as a forum speaker. He was arrested in Danzig last summer just two days before the opening of hostilities. He will relate personal experiences, and interpret events in Europe in the light of our interests.

Marionettes Play to Last Audiences, as Eaton Leaving

The John and Mitzi Marionettes, who have been playing for nearly two years in the Marionette Theater in the Court of the Golden Bough on Ocean avenue, are about to disband.

They will play the Don Blanding episode, "Are You a Bug?", especially written for them, for the last time this week-end. They go on tonight until Sunday at 8:30, with a 2:30 matinee tomorrow.

The reason for the sad breaking up of Caesar the Pup's happy home is that John Eaton is leaving the beginning of next week for New York.

Eaton, who has been prominent in radio, the dance, with marionettes and on the local stage, is to go east for a year of theater. Following the opening performance of "Julius Caesar" recently, in which he played Mark Antony, Eaton was given this opportunity of a year in New York.

There he will study for the stage. He goes with letters to most of the important figures of the New York stage. Besides working in New York, he also plans to be active in summer stock and the barn theaters.

Mitzi, his sister, who has been associated with him in his various marionette, radio and dancing ventures, will leave soon for San Francisco where she is to make her home. They originally came to the peninsula several years ago from the state of Washington.

Maybe someday the others will have engines like velvet because they're electrically balanced after assembly; but Buick has them now.

Maybe tomorrow they will have coil springs all around that never need greasing—but Buick has them today.

Maybe sometime you'll get the five-foot front seat room and Foamtex cushions of the SUPER—maybe you'll get direction signals with automatic cut-off as standard equipment—but you can get those things and a lot besides on Buick this year.

Maybe someday you'll get a car as long as Buick for the money, or with a frame as heavy without paying more; maybe sometime there'll be another eight as big and roomy and powerful that's priced like a six.

But why take a chance on those maybes when this honey's here, ready for you to take over right now?

STAGE. Down in the southland is the Padua Hills Community Theater, a modern indoor auditorium seating a modest 300, where folk plays are a special feature. These depict the life and customs of our Spanish-speaking neighbors on a regular schedule throughout the year. The plays are given each Wednesday to Saturday evenings, with matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays, in case you ever happen to be down that way. The idea behind the Padua Hills theater is to keep alive the romantic life and music of Old Mexico and Early California. It is situated in an old olive grove in the foothills three miles north of Claremont.

DANCE. Inimitable Angna Enters, America's greatest dance-mime, will present a number of new features in her repertoire when she gives her single matinee performance Sunday afternoon, March 24, at the Curran theater, where she appears under the local management of Paul Poz and has been preceded by advance announcement of her triumphs this season throughout the country. She was seen in Carmel last year and it is expected that another chance to see her will be welcomed.

The program opens with one of her new numbers, "Danse Macabre", "Vodvil", and "Let's Go to Town". This is the first of a series of Danse Macabre, related to Miss Enters' series of Danse Macabre paintings. In this she uses a dressmaker's dummy as an idealization of a typical female partner in American vaudeville.

"Ikon-Byzantine" follows with a sombre and brooding mystery such as pervades eastern religion. "Little Sally Water" will be next, telling the story of the growth of the feminine being from childhood through to mature unchastity.

"Wiener Blut Vienna—1939" will be a new number, seen here for the first time. It will tell the story of Nazi oppression since the absorption of Austria into the Reich. "Aprodisiac-Green Hour" portrays the mood of a Parisian vocette. The first half of the program will close with "Oh the Pain of It", labeled "very modern-abstract."

Two new numbers open the second half of the program, "End of the World" and "Homage to Isadora". The former is in three parts, and tells the story of the transformation of a young girl from the pre-war days of 1914 War through to the end of the war. The next number is a tribute to the great Isadora Duncan. The two closing numbers are "Boy Cardinal," and "Artist's Life". Tickets are on sale at Sherman Clay & Company.

BOOKS: Anne Fisher, author of "Cathedral in the Sun", her third book just off the press and about Carmel Valley life between 1818 and 1864, had a successful author's autograph party at the Village Book Shop on Saturday afternoon.

Present were Thomas Meadows, Carmel Valley resident, whose sister, the late Isabella Meadows, provided much of the material for the book, and members of the Boronda family and Francesca Abby, the latter's of Monterey. Anita Abby Church mother.

Reports about the peninsula, especially from the Village Book Shop and the Holman's Book Den, are that "Cathedral in the Sun" (Carmel Mission) is selling briskly. It was reviewed in The Pine Cone last week.

MUSIC. Salinas Junior College will be represented by six talented students in the National Junior College Festival Symphony Orchestra which will play in the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles April 2 during the National Music Educators Conference. The program will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up.

Members of the 200-piece orchestra will have been chosen from applicants all over the United States, and will be led by Francis Findlay, of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston.

Students from the college who will take part are Evelyn Tholcke of Salinas, Angela Morasca of Salinas, Don Mills of Monterey, Leland Lincoln of Pacific Grove, Marjorie Lewis of Los Banos, and Marie Haver of Salinas.

Four other students would have been chosen except for the fact that the sections they applied for were already filled. These were Alva Andrus, Phil Knoche, Fred Kinzey and Irvin Hall, all of Salinas.

All of these students are now studying under Lorell McCann, head of the music department of the Salinas Junior College.

PHOTOGRAPHY. Old Gloucester, romantic fishport of New England, and much painted; Mexico, from Monterrey to Huaxaca; the New York World's Fair, and fishing scenes off the coast of Nova Scotia were reproduced in color by Alvin Jacob Beller, Carmel artist, for members of the Carmel Art Association on Tuesday evening.

Beller, who has been on a painting tour with his motion picture camera as a sideline, brought back pictures for the most part in excellent colors. He avoided most of the mistakes of the average amateur on this score.

Particularly good were a few of the Mexican scenes, especially one showing groups of figures moving toward a church; and dramatically effective were grouped figures of people who had come down to the shore to watch the salvage of the stranded steamer Rio Branco on New England shores. The figures were black against a red sunset sky.

As a depiction of technical details, sequences taken aboard a dragger showed how redfish, similar to our rock cod of the same name, are caught off Nova Scotia in a bottom drag net. One shot showed the decks loaded down with 19 tons of the fish, bright red in color, flipping against the dull planking. Another good bit showed the shadow of the main mast and crow's nest swinging back and forth across the foredeck.

Beller has some nice footage which, edited, might make up a highly interesting film. He will show his pictures soon for the Carmel Forum.

Walter Connolly as Victor Herbert on Carmel Screen

The immortal songs of Victor Herbert, the great Irish-American composer, echo through the motion picture bearing his name in which Walter Connolly plays the title role. "The Great Victor Herbert" comes to the Carmel Theater Sunday to Tuesday with Allan Jones and Mary Martin in the Paramount musical. Susanna Foster, 14-year-old songster, is hailed as doing an amazing job in this picture.

New lyrics have been written for three of the Herbert songs, and "Puccinello" has become the birthday song, "Happy Day"; "Al Fresco", written for piano, is now "You Are Beautiful", a solo; and "Yesterday's Thoughts", also a piano piece, is "Wonderful Dream".

Included in the score are the Herbert favorites: "Kiss Me Again", "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life", "A Kiss in the Dark", "Absinthe Frappe", "Neapolitan Love Song" and many others. There's only one tune in the entire score not written by Herbert.

PUBLICITY AND BUNK

Two shining examples of Natural History being turned to advantage by chamber of commerce tactics are the swallows of San Juan Capistrano and the monarch butterflies of Pacific Grove.

The swallows make their annual pilgrimage pretty much on schedule, flying between distant points to make their mud-walled homes under mission eaves—and beneath the eaves of many a tall barn as well. San Juan, after about 160 years, discovered it had a phenomenon and has since acclaimed it twice annually for the astonishment of a news greedy world.

The butterflies of Pacific Grove have a similar migration, collecting during the winter months in great numbers in the piney woods to sun themselves between showers. Pacific Grove, after this had been going on for a generation or more in that region so far as the memory of man is concerned, finally decided to turn the monarch butterfly to advantage, boost Pacific Grove on the wings of a butterfly.

Now what is Carmel doing about these phenomena? So far as we are aware these are the only two phenomena of the kind which Carmel has let slip. We say, "Let slip" advisedly, because the monarch butterflies gathered in great numbers in vacant lots in Carmel until comparatively recent building used up most of their favorite resting sites. And the swallows still nest at Carmel Mission, in the old hay barn at the Mission Ranch Club, and under the eaves of most of the barns in the Carmel Valley.

There are, for instance, the sea otters. We might have an annual re-discovery of the supposedly extinct sea otters. We might let them disappear on a certain date each fall (carefully arranged before hand by anyone wishing to write publicity for Carmel) and then have them reappear on a certain date each spring. (The matter of definite dates is important for the newspaper men and news services which like to keep regular calendars on swallows, monarch butterflies, sea otters, etc.) The sea otters, being regular fellows, would provide excellent photographic material. They're really quite cute, combining the most attractive characteristics of our cats and dogs. And they've $1,000 fur coats, too!

And if the sea otters don't appeal, then there is another phenomenon, the migration of the fur seals. Perhaps you didn't know it, but the fur seals swim by this part of the coast somewhere about 100 miles out in the Pacific. It would be great fun on certain dates each spring and fall to go out in search of them in a chartered boat. The Chamber of Commerce could provide drinks and the newspaper men would be quite happy whether any fur seals were discovered or not.

Then there are the regular pets which might be exploited, like the peg-leg gulls, and the sea serpents, the mermaids, and the rest of the odds and ends of shore life—including the young ladies in scanty garments.

And there are lost mines and shades of bandits and so on. But what Carmel needs for publicity is a darned good migration of some sort! (At this point somebody suggested a migration of what the photographers unceremoniously call "cheesecake". Well, that migration is here, this week-end).

POETRY CONTEST

The editors of The Pine Cone's poetry column are awarding a prize of $25 for the best poem to be printed in The Pine Cone before May 1, 1940. Poems must not exceed 20 lines in length; no manuscripts will be returned; there is no limit to the number of poems which may be submitted. No previously published works may be entered in the contest.

MAN OF SORROWS

*Even the pines bear crosses at this hour,
With upward branches lifted to the sky;
Even the trees remember as they tower
And raise their orisons of grief on high.*

*Easter returns to this enshadowed earth
Where pity fails—and love is crucified;
Where, unexempted by His holy birth,
Condemned, betrayed, the Man of Sorrows died.*

*Yet though He bent His head to death's ordeal,
Redeeming human agony with light,
Men have not grown less base the time reveal,
Nor added one horizon to their sight.*

*Let Him appear, the Inward-shining One!
With eyes of love, and raiment like the sun.*
—DORA HAGEMEYER.

"CONSIDER THE LILIES—"

*Proudly aware the lilies grew
That day in Galilee:—
King Solomon? And is it true?
Not so well dressed as we?*

*At Easter-tide, even to-day,
Their willing blood is shed,
So complimented still are they
At what their Savior said.*
—CLARA MAXWELL TAFT.

ATTAR

*The puff of the thistle, the spun snow of spring,
Loosed on a prying wind, flurrying the bee,
Whitens the day with sudden showering,
And frets the grass in a pied parquetry.*

*The fluff of the locust, new and odorous flakes,
Flutters and tumbles, a swift, silent drift,
In a May storm: a breath of attar breaks,
And balsams mingle where green stirrings lift.*

*In an onset of wind the spring-mad flood
Of full-cored culm and quick-veined pedicel
Bursts like a fragrant freshet in a wood,
And incense beats as if swung in a bell.*
—ALEX R. SCHMIDT.

ONE BORE WITNESS

*One bore witness, who chanced to be
On a sundown stroll along the sea,
How combers infused with afterglow
Were miracle-turned, row on row,
To transitory hyacinths
Burgeoning from dark, bulbous plinths;
So many the flowerets on a stem
Their own heft over-toppled them.
And one bore witness to further wonder . . .
The crash of their fall: reverberant thunder,
While sand beyond the high tide marks
Was petal-strewn with swishing arcs.*

—ETHEL ROMIG FULLER.

POWER POLITICS

Our local political campaign is going to have national repercussions, if there is anything to the report we read in last week's Cymbal about the machine which is getting underway to elect an "Army," so-called, candidate to the council.

A U. S. Senator named Hatch has been instrumental in some legislation which affects the participation of persons receiving even part of their income from the federal government. It seems to us that U. S. Army officers, retired, come under this category.

We suggest that this is a case for the F. B. I. If the Army has a candidate and is taking a hand in local politics, we can probably arrange to have Ocean avenue patrolled by U. S. Marines. (The Navy may have a candidate, too, so both the Army and Navy are ruled out for patrolling).

Or maybe, the Marines, being on the U. S. payroll, can't supervise our local campaign either, for that's mixing in politics. At any rate, we recommend to the editor of the Cymbal that he investigate the Hatch law. It has possibilities.

THIS IS AN OPPORTUNITY

It so happens that there is a monumental redwood sculpture by a Carmel artist, Dudley Carter, now stored on the Forest Theater property which might well grace some prominent location in Carmel or on the coast highway.

The piece is hewn from a nine-ton redwood log. The motif is the authentic Indian legend of the origin of music, symbolized by the elderberry, from which wood the Indian made musical instruments. There are two figures, male and female, the male protecting with a huge wing his mate. Twelve and a half feet in height, if placed on a seven-foot pedestal, this huge statue would silhouette prominently against any horizon, stand out boldly against a background of forest, or create a pleasing focal point upon a street or highway.

(This piece is not to be confused with another redwood sculpture which was started under a WPA project by other local artists, but was made there by Mr. Carter).

While the city is scarcely in a position to purchase the piece at this time, it would be an excellent object for donation if it were found to be suitable to all concerned. Hardly could a more suitable creation of art be found to set up as a symbol for Carmel. There are already the Serra Monument in Carmel Woods and the Veterans' Memorial Fountain on Ocean avenue at San Carlos for precedents.

Mention of a redwood monument was made some time ago at the city council meeting, and it appeared at that time that some such use for a redwood sculpture would be welcome.

This is an opportunity not to let pass without serious consideration. Mr. Carter will have to move the figures, the mass of which now is about five tons, from the Forest Theater, and if it is offered for sale it is apt to go to some location far from Carmel. The piece is recommended not so much upon the basis of recommending it as an art critic might, but because it has genuine appeal for the more or less common people, the average people who reside in Carmel or come here to visit. It is an attractive piece of serious work by an accomplished artist. We would like to see this remain in Carmel to be enjoyed by everyone of us in Carmel. We feel that it would be appreciated.

For anyone wishing to obtain a more complete idea of what the redwood figures are, a photograph of them may be seen at The Pine Cone office.

problems.

Money is an excellent contrivance for the efficient handling of our real wealth—goods and plant and real estate and so on. Just as the deed to a farm stands for ownership in that farm, so money stands for ownership of things in general. When you have a dollar in your pocket you own a dollar's worth of any sort of goods that are in the market for sale, and all you need do to get possession of desired goods to that value is turn in the dollar.

Of course dollars aren't the only kind of paper wealth we have. There are deeds and mortgages, stocks and bonds, warehouse certificates and certificates of ownership, for instance. But unlike dollars they all relate to specific properties of one sort or another, and are used in holding those properties. Dollars relate to all property, and are useful only to buy with.

Dollars, then, stand for wealth that we own but haven't taken possession of. Other types of paper stand for wealth, or liens upon wealth, that we possess. And the total value of all our paper wealth, both dollars and the other sort, equals the total value of all our real wealth. For the paper wealth stands for the real wealth.

The market value of any commodity is exactly the amount of money which it costs to get it into the consumer's hands, beginning with the value of the raw materials in the ground and ending with the retailer's profit. In this must be included all sorts of hidden charges, depreciation, depletion, overhead, taxes and even the levies of racketeers, if any. That money is distributed as the goods move toward the consumer. They can't sell for less without causing someone to take a loss, and they can't sell for more because there isn't anything more.

If the people who take it in bring it back to the market to buy goods, then all the goods that go to the market will be met there by just enough money to buy them. The more goods the more money, and an increase in production will create a corresponding increase in demand. So all we'll have to do is produce goods that people need and want and, so long as we don't go beyond the limit of physical requirements, a profitable market for them will be created automatically.

But we know that things don't work that way. So it appears that What happens to it? Does it do some of the money distributed when goods are created doesn't get to the market to buy them. And here is the prime source of economic difficulty in a free economy like ours. Cope with it and you've got depression beaten for all time.

What money doesn't get to market? Why doesn't it get there?

more good to our system in the place where it does go than it would at the market? If not, can it be made to go to market? And if it can't, what may be done to

Oh, where do the dollars go, my friend?

Oh where do the dollars go?

For some seem to stray and keep slipping away and

We're plunged in industrial woe.

It's this that has spoiled our show, my friends,

It's this that has spoiled our show,

With market obstruction that drops our production

To twenty or thirty below.

Oh, where do the dollars go, my friends?

Oh where do the dollars go,

That go into hiding instead of providing

Our system with sales and with dough?

And how can we make them flow, my friends?

Just how can we make them flow;

Retrieve them, restore them, or compensate for them?

We'll never get rich till we know.

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal." These words from Matthew comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, March 24, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Matter". Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God . . . And we know that all good things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Rom. 8: 18, 19, 28).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Emerge gently from matter into Spirit. A Good Time for All—

College days are here again! At least as many college boys and girls who can manage it have piled into their cars and driven down from the Berkeley and Stanford campuses to spend their Easter vacation in Carmel. They are having a good time and are getting pinker each day the sun shines; some of them are already like cooked lobsters but they are happy and Carmel is happy to have them as long as they are good little boys and girls and don't leave rubbish on our beach and drive too fast in their automobiles which are crowded to capacity. Carmel residents are heard to remark that the students seem to get younger every year but it is really the sad fact that we of Carmel are getting older each year but many of us remember with nostalgia the days when we, too, crowded to Carmel at Easter time and slept on couches or in sleeping beds on the floor and dashed to the beach and dashed up town and just dashed . . . and the vacation was over too soon . . . and so, too, are college days.

Writing a Book—

Newcomers to Carmel are Mr. and Mrs. John Burr, who have taken a cottage on Lincoln street. Mr. Burr is a basso profundo, and former member of the San Francisco opera company. Mrs. Burr was a solo dancer with the same company. Mr. Burr is busy writing a book while he is in Carmel.

Mrs. Audrey Patterson and her mother, Mrs. E. Loescher, came over from Fresno to spend several days seeing their friends in Carmel this week.

They'll Pour Coffee—

Presiding over the coffee urns following the play reading by Ronald Telfer at the American Legion Hall tomorrow evening, will be Mrs. Talbert Josselyn and Mrs. Frank P. Topping. Receiving those who attend the affair will be Mrs. Fred Goss and Mrs. Peter Elliott. The decorations will be in charge of Mrs. Tom Riley and Mrs. Earl W. Jukes.

Enjoy Dancing Party—

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Davis invited a few friends to their home at Carmel Highlands last Saturday for an evening of dancing. The moon obligingly came up during the party so that the guests could see the remarkable view of the ocean and Point Lobos from the Davis' house which is perched on the side of the cliff. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Keith-B. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Bertam Dienelt, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald MacPhail, Miss Marion Howes and Jack Lancaster.

Tau Mu Tea Wednesday—

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Harry Raine in Monterey and Mrs. George Smith in Pacific Grove.

PLAYHOUSE KEEPS POLICY OF CHOOSING SCREEN FARE

Entering a field until five years ago dominated by the "block" or "blind" booking policy thrust upon motion picture exhibitors by distributors, the present owner-manager of Carmel's Playhouse (until recently the Filmarte), persisted in a selective plan, actually preferring proven second-run to indiscriminate first-run pictures.

Dick Bare, on taking over the plant on a three-year lease, carried on the same policy. The house, now again in its owner's hands, has achieved the name, according to a recent publication, of "a unique theater, showing only films of distinctive merit, regardless of date or country of origin." Almost a dozen review magazines are constantly being consulted by the Playhouse staff, resulting in a remarkably high average of quality in the films shown, though few are local first runs, according to the management.

Now playing is the delightful comedy, "Call It a Day", with Olivia De Havilland, Roland Young, Ian Hunter, Alice Brady, Anita Louise and Frieda Inescort. Taken from the brilliant stage play which amused London and New York for two seasons, the fine cast, clever story and witty dialogue distinguish it as a picture not to be missed.

"A Star Is Born" follows, opening next Monday. This is an amusing and moving story of Hollywood's half-comic half-pathetic army of extras, with Janet Gaynor starring. Supporting her and heading a remarkably good cast is Frederic March. Janet Gaynor and Adolphe Menjou, who by coincidence also plays in the film, are two of the 13 Hollywood stars who have in fact come up from the extra ranks. In many respects this entertaining picture is Miss Gaynor's own "success story."

"Marked Woman" opens next Thursday. The story is laid in the sinister background of the vicious New York "clip joints", recently put out of commission by energetic District Attorney Dewey. Eduardo Cianelli, remembered by everybody for his magnificent performance in "Winterset", plays the role of racketeer superbly.

Late news and selected short subjects are included in all programs played twice nightly with matinees on Saturday and Sunday.

WHITNEY'S IS OPENING CONTINENTAL DINING ROOM

GUESS WHO'S DOING IT

There has been a lot in the national magazines about a Harvard man who doesn't take Anne Sheridan at her oomph-value. He's none other than Whitman Hobbs, son of Mrs. Henry Forrester and nephew of Mrs. Sidney Fish. Now a junior at Harvard, he is editor of the Lampton, humor magazine, and a former Douglas schools student. Incidentally, his cousin, Stuyvesant Fish of Carmel, is with him at Harvard.

is our own. In the presidential election in 1936, only 53 per cent of the registered voters in New York State actually voted. And so it goes in every state in the Union, in election after election.

The Pine Cone has no concern with the question of for whom you vote. It believes that certain candidates are preferable to others and will so state nearer election, but it does believe that every person who has the right to vote should vote. Of course, there will be some who will have legitimate reasons for not casting their ballots, through illness and such things. And we shall be pleased to print those reasons as sent in to us by mail by such persons as wish to explain their failure to vote. At the same time, absence from the city on election day can only be a good reason under special circumstances, for absentee ballots may be obtained from the city clerk from now until April 4th, five days before the election.

It is our hope that through publication of the names of those who can vote but don't, we may be instrumental in increasing the total number of ballots cast in the coming election. We know that some feelings may be hurt, but we believe the fact of bringing out a big vote is far more important than delicate sensibilities. A man or woman who does not exercise a privilege for which blood has been shed should be made to answer to his fellow citizens. The willful neglect of a public duty is a shameful thing. We shall be very proud if we can do something to make the people of this village realize the shame that there is in failing to vote.—A. M.

Yale Puppeteers Play March 30 at Sunset Stage

Sophisticated to the stream-lined minute, built for adults only, the Yale Puppeteers bring their hilarious, inimitable show a second time to Carmel on Saturday evening, March 30, under the Denny-Watrous Management. The demand for seats has placed the entertainment in Sunset auditorium instead of in a smaller hall as last year.

The Yale Puppeteers first gained fame in the Olvera Street theater in Los Angeles, where nightly such wits as Charlie Chaplin, Marie Dressler, and such less-often-seen stars as Greta Garbo, and such critics as Isabel Morse Jones, David Bruno Ussher, and the most sophisticated visitors of the hotels sought seats for entertainment that would delight even the world's greatest comedians themselves.

Lampooning satire of the world today is the special field of the Yale Puppeteers. Lyrics by Foreman Brown, and music with Foreman Brown at the piano, and Harry Burnett in full view directing by strings the actions of F. D. R., the First Lady, Alexander Woollcott and other front page celebrities, bring the "Small World Revue" of the Yale Puppeteers to date in 1940.

Barbara Winslow, who won her way to be fourth ranked U. S. woman tennis player in 1938 after leading the girl's division the year before, and then was stricken with illness which nearly had a fatal end, is making a comeback on the courts.

During the past year she has made tremendous strides toward health and played in several club tournaments, winning the first of these events and then being nosed out when her partner failed to give her tight support in a later tournament. She even threatened to win everything locally that she entered, in spite of her then weakened condition.

Today to all appearances she is recovered, and looks the picture of health. Next week, brown as a berry and full of the ol' Winslow fight, she'll tackle the annual Del Monte championships, next Thursday to Sunday.

Among the entrants will be Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, May Doeg of Santa Monica, Dorothy Head and Barbara Duncan of Alameda, Frances Umphred and Daphne Buckell of Oakland.

Barton, Inventor of Bathysphere, Speaks March 28

Will Beebe's name is well known in connection with going down to the ocean depths in a little round cell of metal suspended by a wire thousands of feet in length.

The inventor of this little diving cell is Otis Barton, who comes to the Monterey Peninsula Forum at Walter Colton School, Monterey, on Thursday, March 28, at 8 o'clock.

It was Barton who directed two undersea expeditions to the Bahamas and who cooperated with Dr. Beebe in three seasons of deep diving off the shores of Bermuda. He completed his invention of the bathysphere just a decade ago.

His talk on the peninsula will be illustrated with motion pictures of undersea battles among sharks, sawfish, crocodiles, morays, jewfish, octopi, sting rays and barracuda. The public is cautioned, however, that these were not taken from the little window in the bathysphere, but with an undersea camera in shallow water where the sunlight could penetrate. His talk is dramatically entitled "The Perils of Deep-Sea Diving". There is no charge for Forum talks.

Barton's ambition did not end with the completion of the bathysphere, but he now pins his hopes on something more diabolical as an instrument for investigating what goes on down in the deeps. It's the diphrobenth which will achieve the ultimate.

Says Barton: "I now believe the final step is ready to be taken. With the building of the diphrobenth, science will be able to explore the world's greatest mystery—unknown life at the ocean bottom." Meaning of diphrobenth: Undersea chariot, in which the bug-eyed scientists may roam the ocean bottom a mile deep, dragged by a cable from the mother ship.

SPORTSWOMAN OF INDIA FORUM SPEAKER TONIGHT

"India, the Struggle for Independence", will be discussed tonight in Sunset auditorium by Miss Bhicoo Batilvala, a native of India and a British barrister and sportswoman. The lecture is presented by the Carmel Forum. All adults are invited to attend without charge.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. That a special municipal election is hereby called and ordered to be held in the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, on Tuesday, the 9th day of April, 1940, for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters of said city the proposition of incurring a bonded debt by said municipality for the acquisition, construction, and completion of said municipal improvements hereinabove mentioned and herein-after described, said special municipal election being hereby consolidated with the general municipal election to be held in said city on the 9th day of April, 1940, for the election of a City Clerk for a term of four years, a City Treasurer for a term of four years, and four members of the City Council, two of whom shall be elected for a period of two years and two of whom shall be elected for a period of four years.

Easter Sunrise Services at Presidio This Sunday

Attracting a dawn crowd of 6000 persons a year ago, the Easter sunrise service at Soldier Field, Presidio of Monterey, will be repeated this Sunday at 5:45 a. m.

The Young People's Christian Federation of the peninsula, sponsoring the sunrise service, this week announced Evangelist Tom M. Olson as the main speaker on this occasion. He is well known for his "Sermons from Science" at the Exposition last year in collaboration with Rev. Irwin Moon.

In addition to the address, the program will include community singing, a Young People's chorus, two selections by the colored choir of the 47th QM Regiment, with the opening and closing music by the Presidio band.

For the benefit of those unable to attend, the program will be heard over radio station KIDON between 6 and 7 a. m. Free transportation to the field may be arranged by phoning Monterey 3535, it is also announced.

The detailed program: "Onward, Christian Soldiers", "Holy City", Easter selections—Presidio Band.

Invocation — Rev. Norman Paul Babcock.

Community singing—1. Low in the grave He lay, Jesus, my Savior, Waiting the coming day, Jesus, my Lord.

Chorus: Up from the grave He arose!

With a mighty triumph o'er His foes.

He arose a Victor from the dark domain,

And He lives forever with His saints to reign.

He arose! He arose!

2. Vainly they watch His bed, Jesus, my Savior;

Vainly they seal the Dead, Jesus, my Lord.

3. Death cannot keep his prey, Jesus, my Savior;

He tore the bars away, Jesus, my Lord.

Scripture Recitation (John's Gospel, Chapter 20)—Elizabeth Pollette.

Trumpet solo, "Christ the Lord is risen today",—Vincent H. Coletta, Jr. "My Risen Savior"—Dorothy Hoyt. "He Lives"—Monterey Peninsula Young People.

"My Risen Savior"—John Berutti. "The Old Rugged Cross", "The Song Triumphant"—47th Quartermasters Regimental Choir.

Easter Message—Tom M. Olson. Community Singing:

1. All hail the power of Jesus' name, let angels prostrate fall;

Bring forth the royal gladness, and crown Him Lord of all.

2. Let every kindred, every tribe, on this terrestrial ball

To Him all majesty ascribe, and crown Him Lord of all.

3. Oh that! with yonder sacred throng we at His feet may fall,

Join in the everlasting song, and crown Him Lord of all.

Prayer and Benediction—Rev. Wm. V. Morgan.

Postlude—Presidio Band.

Father Hubbard's Talk Will Assist Victim of Illness

When Father Hubbard, "The Glacier Priest", speaks at Sunset auditorium next Friday evening at 8:30, it will be in aid of a peninsula professional woman whose illness has made it necessary for her to give up her job. She is being thus assisted by the Soroptimist Club, sponsor of the talk by Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., Santa Clara geologist.

Father Hubbard's experiences are well known to readers of the popular magazines. For years he has written of adventures climbing the mountains of Alaska on field trips as a geologist. Those who know of him in this manner, will welcome the opportunity to see and hear him in person. He will tell of his latest expedition into the far Northwest, and will illustrate his talk with motion pictures.

The Soroptimist Club is presided over by Miss Kay Smits, who is in charge of the Monterey Community Hospital. Miss Mary Camp is in charge of tickets, which may be obtained at Spud's, Hotel Del Monte, the Palace Drug store in Monterey and the Pine Cone candy store in Pacific Grove.

Robert Leidig Has Fourth Proposition

All four of the present proposals are rental in nature. The land owner would build the usual L-shaped post office building and in return obtain a contract with the post office department for a five-year lease.

E. H. Ewig's five-year lease terminated recently and the government is continuing to use part of his building on a month-to-month rental basis.

DEED: Margaret Despard to George W. Falcon and Mark Lusier, Mar. 2. $10. Lot 12, Blk. 58, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

SHORT ESSAYS

...on... DEMOCRACY

OUR DUAL NATURE

We all think and speak often enough of the U. S. A. but do we pause often enough to appreciate the fact that it means UNITED STATES of America? We are a group of 48 states, each with a strong state government of its own but UNITED under a common central government. This makes us different from some of the other democracies. Our democracies may be said to have a dual nature because each of our citizens has two governments — the state and the national. In order to win support for the Constitution, this arrangement—called the federal system—was agreed upon as a compromise between those who wanted a strong central government and those who did not want to take away any of the powers of the states. However, the compromise possesses virtues of its own. A democracy must be run by consent of the people. But how difficult it is for 130,000,000 people to know just what their government is doing and why, when that government is hundreds or thousands of miles away! Yet if the people do not understand their government and if they are not interested in it, a democracy cannot be expected to prosper. Since we have state and local governments, it is possible to keep many government activities close to the people. This makes it easy for them to watch their government and learn about it. Also in a country as large as ours management of the government's business, that is administration, is necessarily such a big and complicated affair that it is hard to do a good job when too much responsibility is centered in one place. Our state and local governments make it possible to avoid too much centralization of this kind. Another advantage of the federal system is that experiments may be made more easily in the states than on a nation-wide scale. When changes in the national government are considered, we can often benefit by experiences in the states, successful or unsuccessful. The boundary line between state government and national government has never been fixed. We are fortunate that it has been possible to shift this boundary line from time to time as conditions have changed.

To the Editor

Editor Pine Cone: Rumors that a combination of candidates for the city council are in existence is rather unfortunate; the facts are doubtful.

It is probably a smoke screen, and animals hide behind a fog of their own manufacture, and some people see a ghost in every shadow.

Looking back to the disastrous results to Carmel of the last "combination" would not give much encouragement to the formation of another.

As a result of the incompetence, waste and extravagance of the last two years, the city has approximately $25,000 to meet the city pay roll for the remaining nine months of the year. As the monthly expense averages about $5000 per month, it doesn't need an Einstein to figure what the deficit will be at the end of this year.

The usual procedure is either to raise taxes or float a bond issue, neither of which will be popular with the voters.

There is a plan, as every one knows, to boost the city assessments to the level of the county; with the promise that rate will be lowered, but with a change of the city clerk it would be very easy to raise the valuation.

I hold no brief for Miss Van Brower, but she is the best friend the taxpayer of Carmel ever had.

Yours very truly,
E. L. TAYLOR.

All Saints' Church Plans To Remodel Old Building

Following through plans which have been under consideration for some time, All Saints Episcopal Church of Carmel will have extensive remodeling of the original building on Monte Verde street.

This was decided last week at a meeting of the vestry which also decided to engage Arnold Constable of San Francisco as architect to enlarge and make more attractive the present location.

This was announced on Sunday for the congregation. As plans take shape, assessments will be made, according to the church.

No date has been set for the start of building.

The present home of the All Saints Church is about 27 years old, having been built about 1903.

The architect is regarded as a happy choice as he is especially conversant with church architecture, having designed St. Francis Episcopal Church which is under construction in San Francisco. He is type of architecture.

Hit-Runner, Forger Arested; Police on Full-time Schedule

Pleading guilty to a hit-run charge after damage to the parked car of Dr. Walter Lehman on Fifth, near Monte Verde, this week, Douglas Boronda, 20, of Monterey, was fined $50 by Judge George P. Ross.

Unable to pay the fine, Boronda elected the alternative of going to jail for five days.

Picked up on teletype information in Willows, Jean Marin was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Ray Baugh in Monterey yesterday. She was charged with passing a worthless check at a Carmel service station.

On full-time duty, Carmel police early this week issued 18 citations, mostly to young people, and 50 courtesy cards. Attention is called at this time to parking rules which are enforced in Carmel.
